Words of Remembrance

Our Dalton was a talented young man, skilled with his hands like his father. He enjoyed his job, welding various metals, displaying an uncanny skill for his young age, often being called upon to tackle the most difficult of projects at work. He loved the outdoors and spent many happy hours hunting the wary duck. His abilities to hit the target were honed by his enthusiasm for trap shooting in school where he forged many close relationships with his friends and school mates. One of his passions was his truck. Dalton spent many hours upgrading, repairing, and customizing his favorite mode of transportation. Like his dad, he was a creative perfectionist and worked hard to make sure everything he set his hands to do was the absolute best that it could be.

Dalton was not afraid to tackle the most daunting projects at school or at work. He had an unshakable confidence in his own abilities and we will miss this remarkable young man, realizing that our future without him will be dimmed. We shall never forget our Dalton, and we know that we shall see him again one day. For now, he will remain, lovingly caressed in our hearts.
